

Hauntings in Dublin

Of all the cities in the world, Dublin has a claim to be the most actively paranormal. The layers of violent history are there to see, from the underground caverns of St Michans church to the iconic St Stephens Green, which has seen hangings and gun fights over the centuries. Dublin has a chronicle of hauntings to match any other place claiming to be steeped in eventful history. Hauntings in Dublin is a different kind of ghost case book. It brings together established tales and modern unexplained everyday experiences of Dubliners and visitors to the city. Here you will find the famous and the infamous, the literary celebrities and the unknown people of the streets, their stories told in a rich compendium of tales, ancient and modern. Stephen Wade is a freelance writer and lecturer, researching both crime history and paranormal studies. This is the third book for Halsgrove in his Hauntings series.
