

Love-Lust-Kink #17 Book 10. Sex-Love-Porn Addict Guide

I think every man has some semblance of compulsive sexual behavior at least once a day, everyday. This can be as innocuous and invisible as fantasy thoughts. The business part of mans true nature is that phony experts and psychobabblists have come on the scene claiming to be able to cure what is natural to you. Its like trying to make a gay guy straight. Its not gonna happen. I remember seeing all these middle-aged, married, Christian men types at some kind of Promise-Keepers type meeting. It was free and open to the public, held in a church hall. I sat in the back and watched. What struck me was that most of these men did not realize you are what you are by nature. They thought their sexuality was pliable, that you can change it. You might be able to control it but you cant change it. The speakers sincerely believed they could cure these men of sexual fantasies, masturbation and watching porn through a devotion to God. These men wanted to overcome their natural horniness and be good family men. This is a big problem nobody ever talks about, that a man is still very horny, even after ten years of marriage when hes got several kids. He has to deal with it. One man said he didnt abuse himself for 25 years. I cant believe a former porn addict didnt masturbate for 25 years. He said everyday he starts off with a prayer. All the men were deal silent in the audience because they knew its not easy. The Demise of Guys Relationships matter ... or do they? I happened to see Phillip Zimbardo on a TV talk show who is the past president of the American Psychological Association. I remember him because back when I was naive, I majored in psychology at college. I was a typical stupid kid with good intentions who thought the answers to life or at least a part of them were somewhere on a college campus in all that stuff they call the social sciences. Now I think the social sciences is basically a bunch of bull. Im not throwing the baby out with the bath water. There are some interesting, potentially useful tidbits of knowledge there but its all pretty well nothing next to understanding your true nature and living by it which is why I think its one of the biggest unacknowledged frauds around. Anyway, I used to watch his TV show about psychology back in the 1980s so now I see him 25 years later with Phil McGraw promoting his book The Demise of Guys about the great tragedy of young men in the modern world. He is saying that back in the day, we didnt have porn or at least if you wanted to see it, you had to go out in public to an adult theater and watch it while you kept your pants on but nowadays you flick a button on the internet and its all there. He says this is causing a lot of young men to say the hell with trying to pursue an intimate, monogamous relationship with women. They dont talk to women, dont want to, have no desire to get into a normal heterosexual relationship. Porn arouses them more and gives them great rushes of pleasure and endorphins when they watch and play with themselves. The problem with Zimbardo and McGraws logic is that this is mans true nature, to be aroused by the sight of new, fresh, attractive females and desire to have sex with them ALL THE TIME. Monogamy is an artificial standard imposed on us. You can read articles for both sides at animaldiversity.ummz.umich.edu. I say that in an ideal world, a man would have sex with an endless supply of beautiful women, keeping his favorites in his special harem. When I watched this show, I thought it was kind of sad because these two old guys were trying to uphold some cultural idea of sexual morality they had but who are they in privacy and in the privacy of their minds? Theyre just like me. Theyre lying hypocrites as if they have never masturbated while fantasizing about women. There is no law etched in stone that says as you grow into adulthood and old age, you a
