

Growing An Internal Garden To Cope With Chronic Pain, Illness, and Depression

Think of your body as a beloved garden. Choose the flowers you want to grow. Plant good seeds. Provide nourishing soil. Fertilize it. Refrain from using pesticides. Water it. Feel the joy of seeing new flowers grow. Bask in the wonder of how much beauty can sprout from tiny seeds. It takes time for flowers to grow. Be patient with yourself as you nurture your Inner garden and wait for your flowers to bloom.

After your flowers bloom, the butterflies will come. Remember that they were once homely caterpillars. In order to become butterflies, they had to weave a protective cocoon around themselves. There is a saying: When the caterpillar thought his life was over, he became a butterfly. When you begin this journey, think of yourself as being in a cocoon where your body can take time out to heal.
